Dear Chair,

Award of the Equality Advisory Support Service to G4S

We are writing to express our profound concern at reportsⁱ that the Government Equalities Office has awarded security firm G4S the contract to deliver the Equality Advisory Support Service (EASS). Given the serious and longstanding concerns about the competence of G4S expressed by Members of Parliament across the House and several parliamentary committees, we urge you to initiate a parliamentary investigation into both the tendering process and the suitability of G4S to deliver this vital service. We understand that the service is due to become operational on 1 October and run for three years, with the option of a two year extension. The matter is therefore urgent.

The EASS provides advice and assistance to individuals on issues relating to equality and human rights, across England, Scotland and Wales. In October 2012, it replaced a helpline, previously run by the Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC), which provided a vital resource for individuals affected by discrimination.

In a March 2016 report, the House of Lords Select Committee on the Equality Act 2010 and Disabilityⁱⁱ recommended that the EASS either be returned to the EHRC or managed by the EHRC. In its response to the report, the EHRC strongly supported the recommendation that the EASS be returned to its control and asked the Government whether it could run the EASS or manage it. In its response to the report the Government rejected this recommendation, apparently without explanation.

The 2016 tendering process for the service lacked openness and the procurement specification – which was only discovered after an extensive search – appears to have been seriously flawed, with important requirements identified as “essential” in 2011 either downgraded or now removed entirely from the specified service requirements. The specification does not require a contractor to have any relevant knowledge or prior skills, abilities, experience or track record in delivering equalities or human rights advice. It also fails to address concerns raised with the House of Lords Select Committee or to set out what is required to deliver the contract to what ought to be the required high standard.

We support the House of Lords Select Committee recommendations that the EASS be returned to the EHRC and/or be managed by the EHRC. As the specialist national body charged with advancing equality and human rights, it is clearly best placed to provide advice and guidance to those who believe their rights, dignity and equal worth may have been violated.

By contrast, G4S is one the world's largest security employers. It has earned a reputation for serious, systemic mismanagement and discrimination. It has been responsible for serious human rights violations against those within its care, including at youth detention centres, adult prisons, immigration centres and during removals. We suggest that it is manifestly ill-equipped to provide advice on discrimination and human rights. We suggest that members of the public are unlikely to have confidence in an advice service operated by G4S.

We enclose a dossier which brings together the many serious allegations and findings against G4S. These include the systemic failings which contributed to the unlawful killing of Jimmy Mubenga by G4S staff, the repeated inspection findings of racism and sexism among G4S staff and harrowing official reports of G4S mistreatment of children, pregnant women, and other protected groups.

Reports of a G4S-run helpline have been met with widespread public consternation. A 'SumOfUs' petition urging the Secretary of State for Education, Women and Equalities not to hand over the service to G4S and instead hand responsibility back to the EHRC, has already received over 51,000 signatures.

At a time when reports of hate crime in the UK have surged and recent EHRC reports have highlighted entrenched discrimination in British society we can ill-afford G4S involvement in the provision of discrimination advice. We hope your Committee – or one of your counterpart Committees – may be in a position to urgently carry out this scrutiny. In the meantime, we ask that the award of the contract be placed on hold with immediate effect.

Yours sincerely,
